"Now the Lord said to Abram, 'Go from your kindred and your father's house to the land that I will show you.'" Genesis 12:1

Abram likely had never heard of this God who spoke to him. He lived in familiar surroundings, with family and friends, and security. God told him to leave. And go where? God's answer appears to have been something along the lines of "don't worry about it. Just say yes." Abram did.

Nearly 40 years ago I said yes to God. The question was something along the lines of "will you do whatever I ask of you?" That was "my call." I did not know where it would take me, but I was excited to go.

Not for a moment would I say that I have been obedient at every turn to that simple question. I have had times of great clarity when the path before me was obvious. Other times have been quite murky. I have seen though a glass darkly, and not been able to discern a clear answer. Doubt and fear have plagued me. When I find the courage to follow, I walk by faith, falteringly, but with an honest desire to please God.

The call has taken me many places. Nearly five years ago the call led me to a wonderful church called Broadmoor Baptist. When I was pastor for the first time in Baton Rouge, I looked at Broadmoor and thought what a high calling it would be to go there. Little did I know that about 25 years later the call would take me here.

The impact this church has had on me is life-long. When I struggled with alcoholism, you did what every church should but few churches would. You gave me a way to get well, and a place to return. Your example of grace will echo far and wide. I will make sure of that.

The fact that my call now leads me in the direction of helping people of faith who struggle with addiction should be viewed as a great blessing you have given, not to me, but to the untold numbers who labor in the shadows of a truly miserable life.

I leave with so many emotions, but mainly gratitude. Thank you for the blessing you have been to me and my family. I will always thank God for Broadmoor.

Grace,
Terry Ellis
