A Service Identifying with Christ on His Journey,

"Take Up Your Cross"

As we approach the beginning of Lent, I have been wondering if we haven't misunderstood Jesus' requirement to "take up our cross." I used to think that "taking up my cross" generally meant becoming a disciple of Jesus, meaning to lead people to Jesus, meaning to give people a relationship with Jesus, insurance for the afterlife - the "top floor" rather than the "bottom," and membership in the Church ... so that, they could then "take up their cross" to become a disciple, who leads people to Jesus, gives them a relationship and insurance and membership ... and so forth.

Now I know that's not what it means. Yes, Jesus wants a relationship, but have you ever noticed what a relationship with Jesus meant for, say, Peter, who feared knowing Jesus publicly? Or for John the Baptist, who went to prison and had his head "removed?" Or for the Apostle Paul, who was always in prison - and was killed? Or for Stephen, who was given the nickname "the Martyr" for his relationship with Jesus? Or John, who was isolated on an island from family and friends for his relationship? Ouch!

And "taking up your cross" has little to do with giving people "eternity insurance," or becoming a member of the Church. It isn't about "identity!" Okay, it is, but it is our identity with someone who did some things that angered some ones who thought they had the right to "remove" Jesus. Jesus was given a cross, but not because of his "identity." His problem wasn't with the Atheists, the Agnostics, or the Pagans. It was primarily with the Politicians and the Reverends (uh oh), those who enjoyed power over people.

Jesus warned that those who follow Him must "take up their cross," literally a tool of public derision/shame/execution; and He got a cross because His was not a religion that privileged those in power, those who "lorded over them" (see Luke 22:24-27). His own home church tried to throw Him off a cliff for reminding them God has a history of loving the "wrong people." The Reverends were ready to kill him every time He broke a Ten Commandment (healing/working on the Sabbath). The clencher was when He disturbed the money-handlers and Reverends for making "church" about money (power) rather than prayer (humility). It didn't help that He continually undercut those in power by elevating the poor, outcast, foreigners (see Samaritans), while judging the leaders/insiders to be hypocrites, even banishing them to Hades (see Rich Man and Lazarus).

The cross isn't about identity - it's about identity with Jesus. Sometimes, Jesus is at odds with the Politicians and the Reverends. At times, people wearing gold crosses have behaved like those who nailed Jesus to one. It's not about identity - it's about behavior.
